Japanese is a synthetic language with a regular agglutinative subject-object-verb morphology, with both productive and fixed elements. In language typology, it has many features divergent from most European languages. Its phrases are exclusively head-final and compound sentences are exclusively left-branching. There are many such languages, but few in Europe.

Functions. The English word adverb derives (through French) from Latin adverbium, from ad-("to"), verbum ("word", "verb"), and the nominal suffix -ium. The term implies that the principal function of adverbs is to act as modifiers of verbs or verb phrases. An adverb used in this way may provide information about the manner, place, time, frequency, certainty, or other circumstances of the ...

A verb is a kind of word (part of speech) that tells about an action or a state. It is the main part of a sentence: every sentence has a verb. In English, verbs are the only kind of word that changes to show past or present tense. Every language in the world has verbs, but they are not always used in the same ways. They also can have different properties in different languages.

In most cases, deciding whether to use an adjective or an adverb is straightforward. However, certain adjective-adverb pairs, such as good and well and bad and badly, create confusion and therefore are often used incorrectly. Let's look at these specific groups. But first a reminder: adjectives modify nouns and pronouns, and adverbs modify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs ...
